APPENDIX 1 – DESCRIPTION OF BULLYING

The following descriptors outline what bullying is and support staff and parents to identify all forms of bullying:

- Bullying: is repeated unreasonable behaviour directed towards a person, causing fear, distress or harm that involves an imbalance of power. It creates a risk to the mental and physical health and safety of others. It occurs when an individual or a group deliberately upsets or hurts another person, their property, reputation or social acceptance on more than one occasion.
- Cyberbullying: is the use of technology to bully someone - to deliberately and repeatedly engage in hostile behaviour to hurt them socially, psychologically or even physically. It is generally used to refer to the online abuse of children and young people. Groups and individuals can be both the perpetrators and targets of cyberbullying. Cyberbullying can take place on social media, through online chat and messaging services, text messages, emails, on message boards and in online forums that allow people to comment publicly.
- Cyber abuse: is behaviour that uses technology to threaten, intimidate, harass or humiliate someone — with the intent to hurt them socially, psychologically or even physically. Cyber abuse can take place on social media, through online chat and messaging services, text messages, emails, on message boards and in online forums that allow people to comment publicly.
- Image-based abuse: is when intimate photos or videos are shared online without the consent of the person in the photo or video. Even threatening to share intimate images in this way is image-based abuse. It is a criminal offence under State laws. Alternative terms for image-based abuse include 'non-consensual sharing of intimate images', 'revenge porn' or 'intimate image abuse'. Image-based abuse can also arise when a photo or video is digitally altered (for example, photoshopped), or when a person is depicted without religious or cultural attire which they would usually wear in public.
- Direct bullying: is behaviour that hurts, harms or humiliates and is overt, obvious, and apparent to anyone witnessing it. The actions and words are easy to identify, the identity of the person bullying is usually known, and the acts are focused toward the person being bullied – they know about the bullying as it is happening.
- Exclusion bullying: is deliberately and continuously being left out of activities.
- Extortion bullying: is physically stronger and more powerful students may bully other students into giving up their possessions, buying food and drink, or taking part in rule breaking activities.
- Gesture bullying: is non-verbal signals used to silence and intimidate a victim.
- Indirect bullying: is behaviour that hurts, harms or humiliates, which is often covert, subtle, and not always immediately acknowledged as bullying. The words and actions can be harder to identify, can be done anonymously and discreetly, and the target might not find out about the bullying until long after it has happened.

- Physical bullying: is pushing, shoving, fighting, pinching, damaging, stealing or hiding personal belongings and any other unwelcome physical contact used intentionally to intimidate or hurt someone.
- Psychological bullying: is words or actions used to cause psychological harm. Examples of psychological bullying include name-calling, teasing or making fun of someone because of their actions, appearance, physical characteristics or cultural background.
- Harassment: is when a person is treated less favourably on the basis of certain protected attributes, such as race, religion, sex, age, disability, medical conditions, sexuality, gender identity or intersex status. Treating a person less favourably can include harassing or bullying a person.
- Sexual harassment: is touching, sexually orientated jokes, drawings of, or writing about someone's body, using rude names or commenting about someone's morals, unwanted invitations of a sexual nature or continuously asking questions about someone's private life.
- Verbal bullying: is put downs, particularly those referring to physical characteristics, can result in loss of self-esteem. Racial discrimination or any kind of discrimination based on age, sex, gender, disability, belief or culture is a form of bullying.
- Visual bullying: is offensive notes or material, graffiti or damaging other people's possessions.

Many distressing behaviours are not examples of bullying, even though they are unpleasant and often require teacher intervention and management. There are three socially unpleasant situations that are often confused with bullying. The following descriptors identify what is not bullying:

- Mutual conflict: In mutual conflict situations, there is an argument or disagreement between two or more people but not an imbalance of power. Unresolved mutual conflict sometimes develops into a bullying situation, with one person becoming targeted repeatedly for 'retaliation' in a one-sided way.
- Social rejection or dislike: It is not bullying when, say, people make new friends and distance themselves from old friends. That old friend may feel as though they are being 'socially excluded' but if there is no aggressive intention to cause harm, they are not being bullied. Social rejection is bullying when someone feels alone or left out because of the manipulation of their peer relationships and social status.
- Single-episode acts: Single episodes of nastiness or physical aggression are not the same as bullying. If a student is verbally abused or pushed on one occasion, they are not being bullied. Nastiness or physical aggression that is directed towards many different students is not the same as bullying.
